THEY HAVE THE KEY

Maccabees Enjoy Undisputed Possession of St. Joseph Today.

THOUSANDS OF THEM THERE.

Mayor Starr Welcomes Them and the Great Commander Wants St. Joe and this City United.

The Maccabees have St. Joseph today.

They possess her streets, her hotels, her park and all her public places. They throng her avenues in swarms of thousands, they invade her hotels in hordes and everywhere you turn the badge of the order stares you in the face.

It is the most significant convale of Maccabees ever held in the county, bringing together the entire Maccabee forces of the county and the second regiment of the uniform rank, the former in the capacity of their first annual picnic and the latter for inspection by Mayor General N. C. White, of Port Huron, and Adjutant General Peter J. Abt, of Detroit.

Maccabees and their friends began pouring into the city with the arrival of the first trains and the influx continued until noon. They came from Kalamazoo, South Bend, Battle Creek, Niles, Elkhart and South Haven. The excursion over the West Michigan from the north arrived in two sections, one of 10 coaches and the other of 11, carrying the noted Celery City division, No. 15, uniform rank. A few minutes later the steamer Williams arrived with 400 passengers, including many knights, from South Haven. The regular morning trains over the Vandalia and Big Four railways were crowded and at 12 o'clock there were 3,000 visitors in St. Joseph.

The street pageant was advertised to move at 10:30 but it was 12 o'clock before the many hundreds in the parade were in line ready to obey the command of Marshal John Freund to advance. The procession formed on Broad street and was the most impressive column of people that ever threaded the streets of St. Joseph. It was fully a quarter of a mile long and was made up of the members of the various county Maccabee organizations, of bands of music and a number of the companies of the second regiment.

Headed by a platoon of police the huge column was given the order to march. Both sides of Broad street were flanked with spectators a dozen deep and the door ways and windows of the gaudily trimmed stores along the route were filled with faces. Following the police in the parade came White's military band of Kalamazoo, then the uniform rank officers, the second regiment, Watervliet tent, Stevensville tent with band; New Buffalo tent, St. Joseph Valley tent degree team, riding snow white horses; officers of St. Joseph Valley tent, next a chariot with a group of little girls bearing a banner reading, "The Coming Maccabee," then Frazell's band, and following a float with an unruly goat astride which was a happy-faced candidate giving a farce exhibition of the mysteries of initiation, then The Evening News Boys' band leading a long column of little boys who were also designated, "The Coming Maccabee." As the procession rounded the corner, passing from Ship north on Front street thousands of people witnessed the gorgeous spectacle. After it had passed Great Commander Boynton and Mayor Starr drove up in a carriage and from a position in front of the Hotel Whitecomb watched the evolutions of the second regiment executed with perfect soldierly grace. It was expected to have a program of brief addresses this forenoon but it was nearly 1 o'clock when the procession broke up and the speaking was deferred until this afternoon.

St. Joseph Hive No 551, L. O. T. M. presented Great Commander N. S. Boynton, Great Record Keeper Emma A. Bower and Great Medical Examiner Dr. E. D. Cook, each with a basket of beautiful multi-colored flowers. The recipients kindly expressed their appreciation.

The exercises this afternoon were delayed until nearly 2:30 on account of the large crowd congregated on the Hotel Whitecomb veranda where the speakers were to stand. It was finally necessary to hire an open hack for the speakers.

Mayor John Starr made a short address of welcome in which he turned the town over to the Maccabees and spoke in regard to fraternal societies. He said that every man should be a member of some lodge. It was a duty he owed his family and in this day and age there was no excuse, as every American citizen could certainly spare the small amount necessary to pay his dues. He compared fraternal orders to the church and closed by saying that benevolent societies were a great deal nearer heaven than any church steeple. Mr. Starr then introduced Dr. Eaton, the great medical examiner. The doctor said that he was like a bill of fare for some banquet, in fact the first course—soup—for the reason that when some more eloquent orator could not come he was always put in as a sort of filling. He told several stories to prove that his assertion was correct.

Mayor Starr then introduced the father of the Maccabees, Great Commander Boynton, of Port Huron. Mr. Boynton is a tall man and reminds one of Abraham Lincoln in his personal appearance. He addressed the crowd as "Men and women, boys and girls."

"I could not hear what Mayor Starr said in his short address of welcome but, of course, it goes without saying that he praised up his city as the best in the United States, that's natural, so I need say nothing on that score. I suppose there are many here today from Benton Harbor, the town situated east. I have read for a long time about St. Joe and Benton Harbor uniting and they are no nearer uniting now than they were years ago. What's the matter? Certainly you have had a long enough courtship. Take my advice and for God's sake get married."

He then went on to give a history of the Maccabees and the benefits derived by being a member.

Following Mr. Boynton was an address by the Great Lady Medical Examiner, Mrs. Dr. Cook, and by Past Great Commander, Theodore Beaver of Niles.

The program as advertised provided for an exhibition by the U. S. life saving crew at 1:30, exhibition run by the fire department at 2:30 and a five mile bicycle race for the championship of Berrien county at 3 o'clock, but at 3:30 this afternoon these features had not been pulled off.

TO DIG FOR GOLD.

Company to Be Organized in Benton Harbor for That Purpose.

HAS A CAPITAL OF $50,000.

Plan to Furnish Money to Send Prospectors to the Gold Regions of Alaska.

John E. Barnes, John Robinson, Edgar Nichols and J. R. Eastman are organizing a stock company with a capital of $50,000 to prospect and open gold diggings in Alaska.

Their plan is to furnish money and send about twenty reliable men to the Klondike region next spring to locate claims and manage them. They desire, also, to enter into the lumber business if that industry promises good returns for an investment.

Mr. Barnes was asked by THE NEWS for information concerning their plans and was advised that the matter had not sufficiently developed to warrant giving it publicity.

$10,000 DAMAGES.

Stevensville Saloon Man is Again in Serious Trouble.

A $10,000 damage suit will be brought against Frank B. Johnson, the owner of a saloon in the village of Stevensville, by Mrs. Clara Watt, by her attorney, Charles N. Sears.

Mrs. Watt has repeatedly forbidden Johnson to sell her husband liquor and in her declaration she says he persists in selling her husband anything he asks for, thereby robbing Mr. Watt's family of the necessities of life and causing much discomfort and disgrace.

Mr. Watt draws a pension and it is alleged he no sooner draws his money than he is drunk and continues so as long as his money lasts.

Johnson seems to be having more than his share of trouble as he has been arrested several times before for violating the liquor law and has repeatedly paid heavy fines.

BRILLIANT RECEPTION.

It Was Given Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Parsal Last Night.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Parsal were given a brilliant reception at the home of Mrs. Parsal's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Jay Bernard, Broadway, last night, which was attended by fully 150 friends of the newly wedded pair.

The decorations were exquisite and refreshments of ice cream and cake were served in the dining room by petite Misses Leora Bernard and Edith Tutton while Miss Ethel Bastar served punch in the parlors.

The Mandolin club, which was hidden by banks of flowers and ferns furnished sweet music during the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Parsal will leave Sunday night for their new home in Aurora, Ill., where they will carry the best wishes of a host of friends from this city.

FIFTY-five passengers were brought down from Berrien Springs this morning on the regular passenger train over the Milwaukee, Benton Harbor & Columbus.

—E. S. Mays and wife of Kalamazoo are the guests of Capt. Ludwig and family.

Knights of the Maccabees.

It is requested that all members of Benton tent who can do so will attend the regular review tomorrow night. Business of importance is to be considered, also initiation work.

District President of the Pittsburg Strikers Arrested by Deputy Sheriffs.

LEADS A PROCESSION OF STRIKERS,

And Is Stopped on the Highway for Violation of the Injunction—Operators Put Off the Starting of Their Mines, Leaving the Matter with a Committee—Important Strike of Coal Diggers in Iowa—Fifteen Hundred Men to Go Out—From Illinois Strike Points.

Pittsburg, Aug. 26.—Patrick Dolan, district president of the United Mine Workers of America, was arrested in Washington county yesterday afternoon while leading a body of marchers past the Allison mine of Cook & Sons, near McGovern station. He was arrested for violating the injunction by marching.

Ever since the strike started the miners have been making daily marches from their camp to the mine. From the mine to the railway there is a tramway under which runs the public road known as the Washington pike. Yesterday morning, with a band at their head, about 400 marchers tramped along the pike and passed under the tramway. On their return they were stopped by deputy sheriffs and told that they could not pass under the tramway, but must return to their camp by crossing a field and coming down the railroad. The marchers became enraged, and for a time it looked as if there would be serious trouble. The marchers held a conference and decided to remain where they were and communicated with President Dolan by telegraph.

Volunteered to Head the Parade. Dolan arrived shortly after 4 o'clock and made a speech to the strikers. He said that the deputy sheriffs had no right to stop them from marching on the public thoroughfare as long as their mission was a peaceful one, and told them he would lead the procession. The band with Dolan at its head and the marchers following then started down the road to go under the tramway and on to the camp. When Dolan reached the tramway he was told by the deputy sheriffs that he could go no farther, and when he wanted to know the reason why he was told that such a move was a violation of the law and the injunction. This Dolan denied, and the arrest followed. He was taken to Washington on the first train. The marchers were disconcerted and were allowed to return to their camp unmolested.

Coal Operators Change Front. Pittsburg, Aug. 26.—The coal operators of the Pittsburg district have made a decided change in front since Tuesday. Internal dissensions, mixed with fear on the part of some, caused a split in their forces and a change of base. On its face the move looked to many like a temporary surrender to the United Mine Workers of America. This, however, is denied in most emphatic terms by the most prominent lake shippers, who say they are going to start their mines and supply the demand from the northwest and not stand idly by and let a large volume of business go to operators of other states. They publicly state that they are willing to wait for a week or ten days before a decided move is made. They claim that this will give them ample time to get the lake trade. Some of the operators in the meeting were frank enough to state that the situation at the present time in all branches of labor is critical, and that they have no desire to make any move that would cast odium on the operators of the Pittsburg district.

Left It to a Committee. The session was short and as a result the following was issued by their press committee: "The organization composed of all the coal operators, which has been in session at the Monongahela House, adjourned this morning sine die. This action puts affairs into the hands of a committee appointed this morning under an agreement which was entered into at Cleveland, and which has since been ratified and strengthened by the signatures of a large majority of the railroad coal producers of this district. This committee is vested with discretionary power to act." All efforts to find out who composed this special committee were futile. The press committee after repeated entreaties refused to divulge the names of the committee men.

MORE MEN OUT IN ILLINOIS.

Strikers March to Taylorville and Are Welcomed by the Men Working.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 26.—A State Register special from Taylorville says that 100 striking miners from Pana marched on the Taylorville miners yesterday morning and succeeded in inducing most of the 100 men who were proceeding to work to return home again. The Taylorville men in many instances turned over the contents of their dinner buckets to the Pana men. General Manager Shumway told his men they could do as they pleased about going to work. Only ten or twenty men entered the mine. The Pana strikers will remain until all are out. There was a large crowd of citizens present, but excellent order prevailed. The miners held a meeting at noon and organized a local union and voted to remain out. The Springfield mine at Pana has resumed work.

Danville, Ill., Aug. 26.—The Pawnee mine No. 2 of the Pawnee-Himrod Coal company's mines at Grape Creek, attempted to start up yesterday morning. Only eight men started to work, and the mine was surrounded by about 400 strikers. At 10 o'clock a telephone call was sent in to the sheriff asking that deputies be sworn in to protect the mine and men at work. The company was notified to swear out warrants and they would be served. Sheriff Thompson departed for the scene of trouble and an effort will be made to settle without violence.

Mascoutah, Ill., Aug. 26.—James Carson, state president of the United Mine Workers, says: "We are simply trying to keep the coal strike where it is this week. If we do this we expect every labor organization in the United States to follow our lead."

STRIKE OF MINERS IN IOWA.

Scheduled for Wednesday Next, When Des Moines Men Will Quit.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 26.—One hundred and fifty miners in the Carbon-dale coal mine in this city struck yesterday. There is every indication that next Wednesday there will be 1,500 striking miners in the Des Moines district. The miners have been getting 60 and 70 cents a ton and ask that the scale be raised to 90 cents and $1. They claim that they consented to a reduction in the scale simply for the summer months, and declare they will not work during the winter for such wages. The Carbon-dale miners took the initiative, and after making a demand for a raise and getting a refusal they walked out yesterday in a body. Their action will have much weight with the others.

There have been mutterings for several weeks among the miners, but decisive action has been postponed until Sept. 1, which is looked upon as the beginning of the winter season. There are two mines in the county which work all the year around on contracts, and which furnish regular employment to the men, in which the miners will not strike. But unless the operators accede to the $1 scale, which does not seem likely, it is probable that the others will go out. The operators and dealers say that coal is selling for $1.75 a ton retail, and they cannot pay $1 for mining. There is talk of a combination to force the price to $2.25.

Three Men Without Union Cards.

Superior, Wis., Aug. 26.—There is a strike at the works of the American Wire Hoop company. The machine workers at the factory have gone out, giving as their grievance that the management has granted employment to three non-union men. Demand was made for their discharge and refused, and twenty men went out. It is understood that no question of wages is involved in the matter. The works are shut down for lack of hands. The strikers will be given an opportunity to return to work, and if they refuse the management will look elsewhere for assistance, which they claim they can easily secure.

Struck for Better Wages.

Bessemer, Mich., Aug. 26.—Employees at the Palms mine, operated by Fred Schlesinger, to the number of 375 men, struck for an increase in wages and the officials of the company are here from Milwaukee investigating the matter and trying to make terms with the men. The employees want wages increased to $1.65.

SPOKE AGAINST PLUTOCRACY.

Address of the President of the American Bar Association.

Cleveland, Aug. 26.—At the opening of the twentieth annual meeting of the American Bar association yesterday in the Hallenden hotel the feature was the address of President J. W. Woolworth, of Omaha. He said during his address that old ideas, old standards of law, old remedies for old ills no longer suffice. New evils must be met with new cures, and continued: "It can not be denied that great accumulations of wealth in the hands of the few go along with the process by which the poor are crowded down in deeper depths of poverty; and, more and more, the multitude on the brink is precipitated into the abyss of hopeless misery, while their places are in turn filled by the industrious who beg for work and not for bread."

"So great is the impatience to end all social evils at a stroke that the rights consecrated in the Declaration of Independence and the constitutions are ruthlessly set at naught, and remedies devised with some respect for orderly methods are contemptuously spurned. Even the judges have sometimes used expressions which lead to state socialism." Speaking of the wage-earners he said that if the day ever came for which the labor unions should become saturated with state socialism "the federations of labor, their battalions enthusiastic, compact, disciplined, and moving with one impulse at the word of command, when launched upon institutions under which they supposed themselves trodden down, will sweep from the face of the earth not corporations, syndicates, trusts and aggregated capital only, but all the whole order of industrial society as now organized."

A BIT OF HISTORY.

How the Milwaukee, Benton Harbor & Columbus Came to Be Built.

IT IS AN INTERESTING STORY.

Berrien Springs Predicts the Road Will Develop the Village into a City.

In 1880 the St. Joseph Valley road was projected by parties in this place and Buchanan and a narrow gauge line was built down the river from Buchanan to this village, says the Berrien Springs Era. A survey from here to St. Joe was made and in 1881 it looked as if the road might be extended to the mouth of the river. At that time narrow gauge roads were everywhere building and it was hoped to hitch them together and create systems that would go somewhere and connect important points. The low cost of construction and the sharp curves and high grades practicable with them made people look upon them with some degree of favor as being within their reach when more pretentious roads were out of the question. Before this was found to be an erroneous view of the matter the original men in charge ran out of means and the company became moribund.

In 1882 Mr. Chase, from Joliet, Ill., a railway constructor came here and took hold of the road and hoped to enlist capital to carry it through. He did some work and improved the property between this place and Buchanan but failed to secure the necessary financial assistance and let it drop. After him came a man named Parker who did some grading between this village and Hinchman, in the north-west part of the township and never paid a cent for anything. He went with a rush until pay day and then he left for good. In the meantime Mr. T. B. Innes, of New York City, had tried to enlist capital but had not succeeded. Then Walworth D. Crane, of Baltimore, came on and had a lot of surveying done and out quite a figure for a time but he had no means and failed to secure any and became completely stranded.

In 1889 J. J. Burns, who had experience at the west in railway building, took hold and at that time it was decided to change the northern destination of the road from St. Joseph to Benton Harbor. The grade from here to Hinchman was practically completed, except a half mile across the farm of Augustus Feather, and the gauge of the road was made standard. The light rails from Buchanan down to this village were retained as a temporary expedient and considerable work was done. It really looked as if a road would be constructed and all hands breathed easy. The local bankers had invested in it and became embarrassed and had to close their doors but they stuck to the road to pull out what they had put in. Before a fresh start could be made hard times overtook the country and again the work stood still. The plant was so decayed that it became unsafe and trains could not be run in safety and we were entirely in the dumps until last fall when the Messrs. Patterson raised the wind and began operations once more. They acquired valuable terminal property at Benton Harbor and work began in earnest. When they reached the river at the mouth of Yellow creek they put up a steel bridge which is one of the very best structures of the kind in the state. As it includes a wagon way it is a great convenience to Royalton and will prove a benefit to Benton Harbor greater than the people of that city are yet inclined to admit. Work from each end of the road was then prosecuted and last Saturday, after vexatious delays, on account of the non-arrival of material, the splice was made two miles west of town near the home of George Ewalt.

Of course much is to be done yet and, more than the short line in question, there must be extensions. The activity of Mr. Caulfield and the close relations between him and the Messrs. Patterson indicates that an extension to Nappanee, on the B. & O., a few miles west of Milford Junction, is an objective point in that direction. The company in possession of the road has acquired the South Haven & Eastern and is surveying to connect it at some convenient point with Benton Harbor and extend its line to a junction with the Grand Trunk, probably at Battle Creek. It will be seen, therefore, that this road will soon become a part of an important system, and that it will be a property we shall take pride in. Locally we shall have an outlet for our everyday business, and it brings to life the project talked of for some years, of a water power at this place which will furnish vastly more power than any other in lower Michigan. That could have but one result. It would build up here, at Berrien Springs, a town as prosperous as any in the state, for water power is so much cheaper than steam that it will invite business of desirable descriptions. We shall not have to subsidize establishments as the economy of power is an overpowering inducement. The reward is one that everybody owning property or doing business in this town will share, and the time will come when the men who have so tenaciously stuck to the old and despised St. Joe Valley railway will be thanked for the part they have taken.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

The upper peninsula societies of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will hold a big reunion and celebration at Marquette on Saturday. Many of the state officers of the organization will make addresses.

While Walter Isham, of Rives Junction, was loading his shot gun, to go hunting yesterday morning, it was accidentally discharged, the charge taking effect in his wife's ankle. It is thought amputation of the foot will be necessary.

Willis H. Kelley, of Grand Rapids, aged 40 years, was found dead in the streets yesterday. He had committed suicide by taking a dose of morphine. He was out of work and was despondent. He leaves a widow and a 3-year-old child.

Judge Russell, of Muskegon, at opening court yesterday, sentenced Ernest Meyer to two years imprisonment at hard labor at the Ionia state reformatory for the larceny of a pint of whiskey from Robert Diamond's saloon at Montague yesterday.

Coldwater bakers have raised the price of bread from 5 to 8 cents. A prominent physician, a substantial business man and a skillful engineer of Bay City are organizing a company with $5,000 capital to send a party of four to the Klondike next March. The engineer will himself head the expedition. The capital is nearly all subscribed already. During the six months ending June 30, 1897, according to a statement issued by Railroad Commissioner Wessellius yesterday, Michigan railroads earned $12,838,459, while for the same period in 1896 the earnings were $14,029,537, a decrease of $1,191,078, or 8.48 per cent. The earnings for June were $2,383,405, a decrease of $352,371 from the corresponding month in 1896. Although traffic is now increasing, it is probable that the decrease during the first half of the year will not be overcome.

While thrashing on the farm of Lewis Lefevre, four miles south of Galesburg yesterday morning, a bundle of wheat containing an explosive, presumably dynamite, was fed into the cylinder of the thrashing machine. An explosion followed which set fire to the barn, which, together with its contents, was totally destroyed. The loss is heavy. Insurance, $500. The man who was doing the feeding was blown many feet and seriously burned. It is not known how the explosive got into the wheat.

Slaughtering Prices.
We are on the warpath and must slaughter our goods if low prices will do it. Next Saturday we will sell a 20-year warranted, gold filled, ladies' or gents' Hunting case watch and a 15 jewel Elgin movement for $15.25. Don't forget it. (That day only.)

NOTHING BUT PRAISE

Hospitality of Berrien Springs Gloriously Recommended by Sunday School Excursionists.

A DELIGHTFUL DAY'S OUTING.

Plans for Their Delectation Carefully Considered by the Villagers—Picnic a Success.

The Sunday school excursionists to Berrien Springs returned last night delighted with the day's outing, delighted with the accommodation furnished by the Milwaukee, Benton Harbor & Columbus railway and with the hospitality accorded them by the citizens of the village which is the home of the court house where the county's business was transacted for many years.

When the throng of picnickers arrived at Berrien Springs there were teams, private carriages and public conveyances of all sorts waiting to receive them and transport them to the picnic grounds one-half mile away. If anyone walked it was because he had a disposition to do so. There were vehicles enough to accommodate all and they were offered so kindly and with such sincere generosity that the pilgrims, if they may be so called, were at once impressed by the puritanical dispositions of their hosts.

A band of music, a creditable organization of Berrien Springs' artists, escorted the picnickers to the grove where the dinners were to be spread. It is a beautiful retreat, covering 10 acres of gently undulating woodland, sloping easily and lazily down to the banks of the St. Joseph river at a point where the stream is gloriously rich in natural attractiveness. Here the children indulged in games, lovers sat beneath the spreading branches of the maples and the "old folks" simply rested, watching with interest the pranks of the animated youngsters.

At one o'clock snowy white cloths were spread upon the grass and the contents of baskets were invitingly arrayed upon them. Around the viands in neighboring groups assembled the picnickers and a happy festival followed. After dinner George F. Sonner, the committee on amusements, got a group of frolicsome boys to do some sprinting, offering a Waterbury watch as a prize. Fred Northup was the winner but before he dared claim the prize he was required to enter in a foot race with Myrtle Walker, a fleet-footed little miss who had bested a number of competitors in a girls' race. Myrtle was given a start of 20 feet, and she reached the tape dangerously close to her sturdier competitor.

Of the villagers most prompt in providing for the enjoyment of the visitors may be mentioned Henry Kephart. He is a particular friend of George F. Sonner, and as Mr. Sonner had been diligent in consummating the arrangements for the picnic and was studious in his efforts to have it pass off happily, Mr. Kephart felt disposed to assist him as much as possible.

The 16-mile ride over the newly completed Milwaukee, Benton Harbor & Columbus railway was an experience greatly appreciated. The road is very properly the "scenic" route of Michigan. The first seven miles of the road bed is comparatively smooth, while beyond that distance there are a few disagreeable elevations. The landscape at the bridge where the road crosses the river, is rapturous and interested many eyes yesterday.

The remaining distance to Berrien Springs the road passes among orchards of ripe fruit and over elevations which command magnificent views of the surrounding fruit farms.

ABOUT THE COUNTY.

San Claire.
EAU CLAIRE, Aug. 26.—James Perrine Hamilton, the blind lecturer and scholar gave his interesting lecture, "What a blind man saw in Europe," in the M. E. church last evening. The lecture was given in the interest of the young people's society of the U. B. and M. E. churches, and all who heard it were greatly interested. An opportunity will soon be given to the voters of this village, to decide whether the town shall be bonded to secure a public hall or not. The question is being discussed and no doubt will be settled properly by the votes of the citizens.

The Christian church is receiving a coat of paint.
Miss Gertrude Triber of Big Rapids is a guest of Miss Maude Ward.
Mrs. A. J. Tibbs is visiting her son Arthur, for a few days.

A BROTHER'S KEEPER

When a man who is yet young arrives at the conclusion that life holds nothing more for him and that he can only devote himself to the good of others, there is plenty of keen wretchedness in store for him. If he gets up after a bad blow and is actively miserable and somewhat hateful and resentful, he can yet be happy. But self-immolation is not natural, and anything unnatural brings its own punishment. Another person and other people cannot be the center of the universe for very long. There may come a jar that will put you out of plumb for a bit, but you swing back to your normal position.

The jar that came to Osborne was a hard one. The girl to whom he was engaged told him that her parents were forcing her to marry a certain rich man. Now parents in these days do not force one to marry anybody, but Osborne would have believed whatever the girl had chosen to tell him. He believed this and thought she was a beautiful, suffering martyr, and there was a tragic scene, which she did cleverly, and a parting. After that Osborne lost even ambition, which had been a ruling passion almost above his love. The girl was mean enough, too, to keep his misery alive by writing to him now and then twitting her glided captivity.

Life, he told himself, was henceforth a vain thing, only fit to be used in the service of others. It is not easy to serve others picturesquely in the army. There are no needy and no fallen ones, because when they fall they cease to be in the army. So Osborne bethought him of his brother Alexander.

Alexander lived on a ranch, as Osborne had done. He was 17 years old. At 16 Osborne had been the support of a widowed mother and two children. He had had no boyhood in particular. It had all been work making the ranch pay. Only those who have tried it know what that means. Alexander was not afflicted after this fashion. He lived on his new stepfather and was envious of his brother.

Now, when Osborne brought Alexander on to San Antonio the first evening of his arrival he spoke to him thus: "There's a first class school right in the town, Alex." [Silence.] "I want you to study hard, youngster, to make up for the time you've lost up there in the wilderness."

Alex braced his feet against the porch railing and tipped back his chair. "It strikes me I've lost more fun than about anything else. It ain't fair, Herbert. You've been having a picnic for the last eight years, while I've been slaving in the fields, and I don't see it in the light of settling down right away to digging at books. I want a swing."

If a nature is ambitious, it cannot be altered. The ambition may transfer its object from self to some one else, but it will not die. Osborne's had transferred itself to his brother. So his heart sank. But he had learned toleration. "Well, I'll give you three months, but you must study to make up for it."

"Three months nothing! What's the matter with six?"

"A good deal is the matter. You'll be nearly 18 in six months, and you don't know as much as the average boy of 14. Of course I'm not blaming you for that. You haven't had a fair chance." Osborne forgot that at 16 he himself had passed the competitive examination.

"I guess I haven't—at that or anything else."

Young Osborne had gone barefoot all his life and had never had a whole new suit of clothes to his back or a dime to call his own. Osborne gave him dancing pumps and various seemly suits and a reasonable allowance.

But he thought the allowance small. "Say, Herbert, I can't make out with that measly ten. Make it 15, will you?" he complained.

"No," said Osborne.

Osborne's "noes" were always definite, but Alexander persisted. "Why not? You've a lot more than you need."

"I know best about that. Ten dollars is enough, and it's all I can give you. I've your education to pay for, recollect. You've no expenses outside of an occasional theater ticket and tennis ball—or you shouldn't have."

"You always did catch all the plums," said Alexander.

Then the mail orderly gave Osborne a letter from the girl. Osborne looked himself in his workroom and read it and believed every word of it. And living—even for others—seemed a hard thing for the next few days.

Alexander felt his oats promptly. He excelled at baseball, he learned tennis and dancing by magic and he rode well. Osborne had never been so popular. He had served the Mammon of ambition exclusively until he had transferred his allegiance to the god of love. Since then he had been a martyr—and martyrs are more pleasing in stained glass than in life. And now he returned to the first cult, and ambition allied him. He rejoiced in his brother's money, which was of the Bertie Cecil type, in his magnificent stature, in his beauty and his athletics. He mounted him on the finest horse to be had in the best part of the country—and wore a new uniform himself all winter. He made him for two hours daily and he was well pleased when the boy remounted enough to give his services.

Two months later, the young man on his horse, Alexander, I've told you that mathematics is the best at the Point," Osborne admonished.

"Oh, come, I say, let up, Herbert. I'm trying to learn this piece." He picked up with beautiful absorption at the guitar the lieutenant had given him.

"Put up that thing and listen to me."

Alexander obeyed, as all men did when Osborne would.

"I am going to get you into West Point at 30. When I say I am going to do it, you know it is going to be done. Don't you? None of it depends on me except the study. I can't make you drink, but I'll take you to water and keep you there until you find it will be easier to drink. You can go back to the ranch if you like, but I'm not afraid you'll like it. I don't want to treat you as a small boy unless you act the part of one. You can learn and you must learn or the theaters will stop, and the hops will stop, and the guitar will stop—also the tennis. You have been cutting time, but henceforth you will study four hours a day and I will sit with you to help you and see that it is done."

So four hours out of every 24 Osborne put to the use of teaching one who did not wish to learn. Density can be bored through with patience. It is the india rubber of indifference cleverness that resists. After some of the struggles Osborne would lie awake for the rest of the night from sheer nervousness. The boy slept with untroubled brain. The lieutenant almost came to forget the girl, but never quite. A letter would come when Alexander was most inert, and Osborne would stare straight in front of him and grit his teeth and wonder that a man could live with both sides of his nature thwarted and put back. But he had his reward. Alexander went into the academy at 30. He was the handsomest and most popular cadet in his class—and he failed in the first year.

Just how such things are done no one is ever quite sure, but in Osborne's case it must have been sheer force of determination. Alexander was reappointed, and he himself was made instructor at the Point.

He stood over the cadet with the stinging lash of his ambition, and Alexander was graduated. Osborne unwisely took some credit to himself.

"Nonsense!" said Alexander. "I'd have done it alone. The first miss was only bad luck. Don't think it's your circus."

"It doesn't make any great difference to me whose circus it is so that you come out all right. I'm only glad you're getting some ambition."

"Ambition be hanged! It's the one word in your lexicon. I'm sick of the sound of it. It is the sin by which the angels fell. Look out you don't fall, angel brother."

"I'm not likely to fall, but I should not mind it if it put you on a mountain height."

"No heights for me. I can't breathe rare air," answered the younger.

Now in the course of army events it came to pass that a strange fate made Alexander Osborne second lieutenant in the troop of which his brother was first lieutenant, and the first lieutenant continued his ambitious goading. Alexander was independent at present and resisted to some purpose. He would not spend his nights in study and his days in wire pulling. The war department did not reward that sort of thing, he said. It was action it approved. Wait until his time for action came. Then he would satisfy his brother.

And the time for action did come, but the action was disappointing. They marched 300 miles and then marched back again. Alexander complained loudly that he had had no occasion to display his prowess in battle.

He should have been quite safe in this, for that evening they would be once more in Grant. But the Indian host is not to be reckoned with. At sunset, within ten miles of the post, the Apaches caught the battalion in a ravine and kept it there until well into the night.

The moon came up and showed to the bucks hiding behind the cedars and scrub oaks on the rise the soldiers penned in the gully below them. It was merely for the latter a question of holding out and having a few men killed. The danger was not great unless the Apaches should be re-enforced or the couriers should not reach the fort. So the men took shelter behind bushes and rocks and fired at the flashes of light in the darkness above them. The officers walked about in the deep shadows, firing, too, and giving orders.

First Lieutenant Osborne was with his sergeant and another lieutenant when he came upon Second Lieutenant Osborne crouched down between two rocks, his arms clasped over his bent head and his carbine dropped on the ground beside him.

There was no mistake to be made. The other lieutenant hesitated, the sergeant drew back, but Osborne went up and touched his brother with his foot.

"Lieutenant Osborne," he said to the junior, "go and report to the officer in command, Captain Clarke. I shall have preceded you and have reported you for cowardice."

He went in search of the captain and made his report, and Second Lieutenant Osborne was sent under arrest back to the dismounted horses in the rear. Then the first lieutenant threw open his blouse and covered his breast with a wide, white silk handkerchief that gleamed even in the shadow and walked out into the full moonlight.

It was a matter of only a moment before the hidden Apaches saw him with the white target on his breast, and two of them at least took aim at the target and hit it full in the center, and then Lieutenant Osborne pitched forward on the ground—Overdone.

EXCURSION TO MILWAUKEE.

The Woodmen of the World Will Give a Popular Outing.

The Woodmen of the World will run an excursion on one of the Graham & Morton palace steamers to Milwaukee on Wednesday evening September 1, giving the excursionists all day Thursday in the city. Milwaukee has more attractions for excursionists than Chicago. The fare for the round trip is only $1.

White Dome Geyser Yellowstone Park.

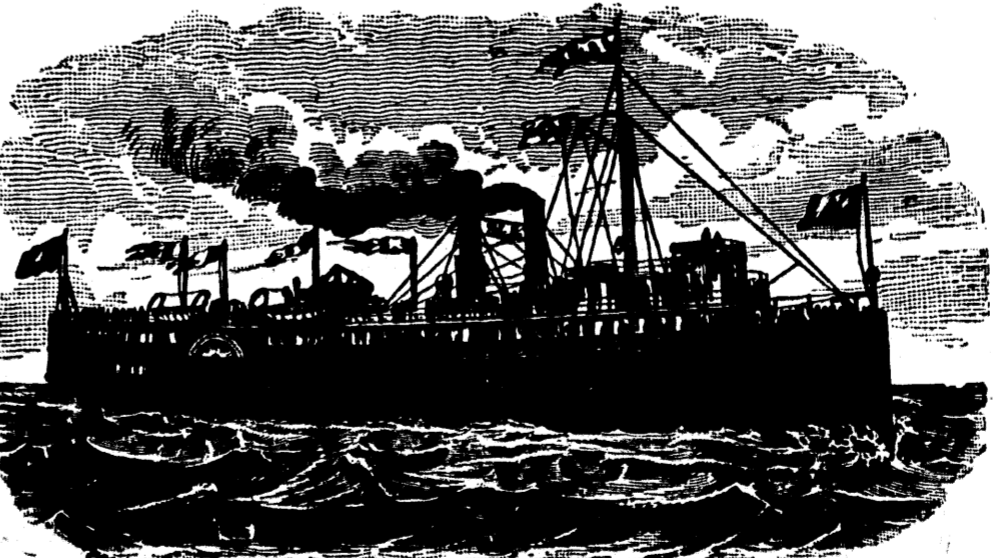

A mile and a half from the Fountain Hotel, and easily reached by bicycle, tourist wagon, or by walking, lies a hidden basin full of nature's caprices. At the entrance, as if on guard, stands the immaculate White Dome. As one approaches, he almost expects to be challenged and asked for a countersign. If such a challenge is given it is in a curious fashion, in the form of a geyser eruption, for the White Dome is a geyser. It is not unlike the Castle Geyser, or the White Pyramid of the Upper Geyser Basin. The geyser is a very white, rather dome-shaped mound, built up from the secretions of its waters, and is the most conspicuous feature of the locality. It is perhaps 25 feet high, with a circumference at the base of 75 or 100 feet. Its eruptions come at intervals of from twenty to forty-five minutes, being somewhat irregular, and the water is thrown to a height of from ten to twenty-five feet.

SCENES AT THE REVIEWING STAND

President McKinley Shows the Liveliest
Interest in the Display. How a Whole
Line Shook Hands with Him—The War
Secretary in the Ranks—Column Requires
Five Hours and Forty Minutes to Pass
the Point of Review.

Buffalo, Aug. 26.—Forty-five thousand
men marched through streets glorious in
flags and bunting yesterday, receiving
his ovations of 500,000 people. The president of the Union they fought to save,
himself their comrade, was at their head.
When the Grand Army procession moved
at 10:30 yesterday morning the sky had
not a cloud. The rain storm of the night
left a clear, bracing air that was like a
tonic to the marching men. The procession
moved for five hours and forty-two minutes. Along the line of march 100 girls,
dressed in the colors of the flag, scat-
tered flowers in the path of the soldiers.
President McKinley rode in a carriage
at the head of the procession and waved
his hat at the cheering crowd. At the
reviewing stand he took his position
with Commander-in-Chief Clarkson and Governor Black and the headquarters
staff passed in review. Of all the throng
viewing the procession no one person
was more enthusiastic or more affected
by the sight than President McKinley.
With his hand on his hat, continually
uncovering to the national colors or the
salutes of the veterans, the president
watched the array of proud veterans
march by. It was certainly a column
to inspire admiration. Such men as Secretary of War Alger, General Lew Wallace and General John Palmer walked
side by side with the negro or the decrepit pensioner whom they had to assist.

New Style of General Hand-Shake.
"Hurrah, hurrah, we'll sing the jubilee,"
a voice in the crowd would shout and high would rise the chorus for a few minutes, dying away as the next band in line destroyed the harmony. The
president paid a pretty tribute to some
colored veterans as they passed by, waving
his hand to them. The Pennsylvania division was a very large one and took some time to pass. Some men from a post at Bradford, Pa., hit upon a novel
method of obtaining recognition from
the president. The man nearest the president was directed to get near the president and shake his hand. The others
formed a chain by grasping hands. The
president laughed very heartily at the
scheme. It was 1 o'clock before Pennsylvania had gotten by the reviewing
stand.

State of Ohio Comes Next.
Ohio came next, and as her banner
came in view there was a roar of applause and the president smiled his acknowledgments of the tribute. This was repeated, but with more emphasis, when
the Canton, O., post came along, and the
president, stepping to the front of the
platform, clapped his hands vigorously,
while the members of the post waved
their hats and shouted. At 1:30 the president and Governor Black left the
reviewing stand just as the department
of Connecticut arrived at the place of
review. Lunch was served at a private residence near-by. The department of Massachusetts was also disappointed at
not seeing the president. The stay at lunch was brief, however, and by the
time the Rhode Island delegation had
come in sight the president and Governor Black were back in their places and
the president was again bowing and
smiling and lifting his hat to the veterans.

MICHIGAN MEN WIN APPLAUSE.

Alger Walks with His Post—Low Wallace
with the Indianians.

After 2:05 the Washington division
passed and was accorded a special wel-
come by the president, the colored veterans especially being recognized. The Michigan division earned great applause
on its appearance, Detroit post especially, and the president said to Commander-in-Chief Clarkson: "That is a fine display." When Fairbank post, of Detroit, came along, Secretary of War
Alger was seen upon the right flank of
the first company, marching in the post
uniform. When the president saw him
he pointed him out and the stand occupants gave him a round of applause.
With Lafayette post, of Indiana, walked
General Lew Wallace, and he received
a welcome. At the head of the Minnesota division a drum corps of the
oldest veterans attracted the attention
of the president and he gave them a
special recognition.

When the Illinois division passed the
veterans uncovered and waved hats and
hands and the president again rising returned the salute by kissing his hand to
them. The orders were very strict that
in passing the reviewing stand the men
should keep eyes to the front, but enthusiasm was greater than duty and
nearly every post broke the rule.

Not one of the interesting features of
the parade escaped the president's attention, and he laughed heartily at the
corn and wheat displays of the west and
the complimentary references to prosperity. It was 3:10 when the New York
state department, Commander Shaw
and his staff, saluted the president and
the New York state veterans began to file
by. They comprised two divisions and
formed the largest department in line.
The battered flag of New York elicited
great applause, and Gettysburg post,
of New York city, was heartily cheered.
On and on went the column, and for
over an hour it was nothing but New Yorkers. General Alger joined the re-
viewing party while New York's delegation was passing.

It was nearly 5 o'clock when the last
of New York state division, comprising
a brigade of Buffalo posts, passed the
stand, and after nearly six hours of constant attention the president and Governor Black were driven to their hotel
amid the hurrahs of the old soldiers
and the applause of the vast crowd.
Throughout the entire day the great
crowd was orderly and there was no interruption upon the president. The president admitted that he was tired with
the long day, but he was not at all discouraged by the procession.

AMERICAN PARTY CONVENTION.

New Political Organization To Be Born at
St. Louis.

St. Louis, Aug. 26.—The first national convention of the American party, a
new political organization which, as the
call issued from Detroit says, will be devoted to the restoration of the spirit and
sentiment of the original federal constitution, met yesterday in Druid's hall
with about fifty delegates present from
nine states and one territory. The states
represented are: New York, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas,
Colorado, Louisiana and Indian Territory. It is stated that a number of other states have signified their willingness to co-operate in the movement. Two sessions were held and a permanent organization was effected with Ellison Stocker,
of Colorado, as chairman, and J. J. Hasselbach, of Detroit, as secretary. After
the appointment of committees on resolutions and representation, adjournment
was taken until today.

Colonel E. H. Sellers, a prominent
lawyer of Detroit, who is at the head
of the movement, emphatically denied the
statement that this is a movement to form
the American Protective Association in-
to a political party. A lengthy address
was delivered by Colonel Sellers, in
which he said that the two principal
parties are false to the doctrine and
principles of equality and are a standing
menace to popular government. He gave
at length his views of needed reforms.
Among other things he favored the system of initiative and referendum and
equal suffrage.

NO NEED FOR A "BULL POOL."

Here Is Abundant Reason Why Our Wheat
Should Boom.

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 26.—An extensive inquiry into European crop conditions conducted by the Orange Judd
syndicate of agricultural papers, including the American Agriculturist, of
New York; the Orange Judd Farmer, of Chicago; and the New England Homestead, of Springfield, Mass., indicates
that the food crop situation abroad is
very grave. Estimates of Europe's (including England) needs of wheat im-

Arrested for Wife Murder.

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 26.—Joseph Le-
clair has been arrested charged
with the murder of his wife,
whose remains were cremated last Fri-
day night by the burning of their farm
house. In a brief examination it transpired that the woman had requested
neighbors that in case of her sudden
death a strict investigation should be
made. Leclair admitted in his testimony before the coroner's jury that
they did not live happily together.

Long, long afterward in an oak forest the arrow will unbroken, and the song, from beginning to end, I found again in the heart of a friend.

—Henry W. Longfellow.

A BROTHER'S KEEPER

When a man who is yet young arrives at the conclusion that life holds nothing more for him and that he can only devote himself to the good of others, there is plenty of keen wretchedness in store for him. If he gets up after a bad blow and is actively miserable and somewhat hateful and resentful, he can yet be happy. But self-immolation is not natural, and anything unnatural brings its own punishment. Another person and other people cannot be the center of the universe for very long. There may come a jar that will put you out of plumb for a bit, but you swing back to your normal position.

The jar that came to Osborne was a hard one. The girl to whom he was engaged told him that her parents were forcing her to marry a certain rich man. Now parents in these days do not force one to marry anybody, but Osborne would have believed whatever the girl had chosen to tell him. He believed this and thought she was a beautiful, suffering martyr, and there was a tragic scene, which she did cleverly, and a parting. After that Osborne lost even ambition, which had been a ruling passion almost above his love. The girl was mean enough, too, to keep his misery alive by writing to him now and then "wondering her glided captivity."

Life, he told himself, was henceforth a vain thing, only fit to be used in the service of others. It is not easy to serve others pitilessly in the army. There are no needy and no fallen ones, because when they fall they cease to be in the army. So Osborne bethought him of his brother Alexander.

Alexander lived on a ranch, as Osborne had done. He was 17 years old. At 16 Osborne had been the support of a widowed mother and two children. He had had no boyhood in particular. It had all been work making the ranch pay. Only those who have tried it know what that means. Alexander was not afflicted after this fashion. He lived on his new stepfather and was envious of his brother.

Now, when Osborne brought Alexander on to San Antonio the first evening of his arrival he spoke to him thus: "There's a first class school right in the town, Alex." (Silence.) "I want you to study hard, youngster, to make up for the time you've lost up there in the wilderness."

Alex braced his feet against the porch railing and tipped back his chair. "It strikes me I've lost more fun than about anything else. It ain't fair, Herbert. You've been having a picnic for the last eight years, while I've been slaving in the fields, and I don't see it in the light of settling down right away to digging at books. I want a swing."

If a nature is ambitious, it cannot be altered. The ambition may transfer its object from self to some one else, but it will not die. Osborne's had transferred itself to his brother. So his heart sank. But he had learned toleration. "Well, I'll give you three months, but you must study to make up for it."

"Three months nothing! What's the matter with six?"

"A good deal is the matter. You'll be nearly 18 in six months, and you don't know as much as the average boy of 14. Of course I'm not blaming you for that. You haven't had a fair chance." Osborne forgot that at 18 he himself had passed the competitive examination.

"I guess I haven't—at that or anything else."

Young Osborne had gone barefoot all his life and had never had a whole new suit of clothes to his back or a dime to call his own. Osborne gave him dancing pumps and various seemingly suits and a reasonable allowance.

But he thought the allowance small. "Say, Herbert, I can't make out with that measly ten. Make it 15, will you?" he complained.

"No," said Osborne.

Osborne's "nos" were always definite, but Alexander persisted. "Why not? You've a lot more than you need."

"I know best about that. Ten dollars is enough, and it's all I can give you. I've your education to pay for, recollect. You've no expenses outside of an occasional theater ticket and tennis ball—or you shouldn't have."

"You always did catch all the plums," said Alexander.

Then the mail orderly gave Osborne a letter from the girl. Osborne looked himself in his workroom and read it and believed every word of it. And living—even for others—seemed a hard thing for the next few days.

Alexander felt his oats promptly. He excelled at baseball, he learned tennis and dancing by magic and he rode well. Osborne had never been so popular. He had served the Mammoth of ambition exclusively until he had transferred his allegiance to the god of love. Since then he had been a martyr—and martyrs are more pleasing in colored glass than in life. And now he seemed to the first one, and ambition allied him. He rejoiced in his brother's success, which was of the Bartle Coot type, in his magnificent stature, in his beauty and his athletic. He mounted on the horse, home to be had in part of the country—and wore a uniform himself all winter. He was with him for two hours daily and he was with him when the boy came home from school and gave him his lessons. He was with him when he came home from the office and gave him his lessons. He was with him when he came home from the office and gave him his lessons.

And Osborne's answer was: "I've told you that mathematics is the test at the Point." Osborne admonished.

"Oh, come, I say, let up, Herbert. I'm trying to learn this piece." He picked up with beautiful absorption at the guitar the lieutenant had given him. "Put up that thing and listen to me."

Alexander obeyed, as all men did when Osborne willed.

"I am going to get you into West Point at 20. When I say I am going to do it, you know it is going to be done. Don't you? None of it depends on you except the study. I can't make you drink, but I'll take you to water and keep you there until you find it will be easier to drink. You can go back to the ranch if you like, but I'm not afraid you'll like it. I don't want to treat you as a small boy unless you act the part of one. You can learn and you must learn or the theaters will stop, and the hops will stop, and the guitar will stop—also the tennis. You have been cutting time, but henceforth you will study four hours a day and I will sit with you to help you and see that it is done."

So four hours out of every 24 Osborne put to the use of teaching one who did not wish to learn. Density can be bored through with patience. It is the india rubber of indifference cleverness that resists. After some of the struggles Osborne would lie awake for the rest of the night from sheer nervousness. The boy slept with untroubled brain. The lieutenant almost came to forget the girl, but never quite. A letter would come when Alexander was most inert, and Osborne would stare straight in front of him and grit his teeth and wonder that a man could live with both sides of his nature thwarted and put back. But he had his reward. Alexander went into the academy at 20. He was the handsomest and most popular cadet in his class—and he failed in the first year.

Just how such things are done no one is ever quite sure, but in Osborne's case it must have been sheer force of determination. Alexander was reappointed, and he himself was made instructor at the Point.

He stood over the cadet with the stinging lash of his ambition, and Alexander was graduated. Osborne unwisely took some credit to himself.

"Nonsense!" said Alexander. "I'd have done it alone. The first miss was only bad luck. Don't think it's your circus."

"It doesn't make any great difference to me whose circus it is so that you come out all right. I'm only glad you're getting some ambition."

"Ambition be hanged! It's the one word in your lexicon. I'm sick of the sound of it. It is the sin by which the angels fell. Look out you don't fall, angel brother."

"I'm not likely to fall, but I should not mind it if it put you on a mountain height."

"No heights for me. I can't breathe rare air," answered the younger.

Now in the course of army events it came to pass that a strange fate made Alexander Osborne second lieutenant in the troop of which his brother was first lieutenant, and the first lieutenant continued his ambitions goading. Alexander was independent at present and resisted to some purpose. He would not spend his nights in study and his days in wire pulling. The war department did not reward that sort of thing, he said. It was action it approved. Wait until his time for action came. Then he would satisfy his brother.

And the time for action did come, but the action was disappointing. They marched 200 miles and then marched back again. Alexander complained loudly that he had had no occasion to display his prowess in battle.

He should have been quite safe in this, for that evening they would be once more in Grant. But the Indian host is not to be reckoned with. At sunset, within ten miles of the post, the Apaches caught the battalion in a ravine and kept it there until well into the night.

The moon came up and showed to the bucks hiding behind the cedars and scrub oaks on the rise the soldiers perched in the gully below them. It was merely for the latter a question of holding out and having a few men killed. The danger was not great unless the Apaches should be re-enforced or the couriers should not reach the fort. So the men took shelter behind bushes and rocks and fired at the flashes of light in the darkness above them. The officers walked about in the deep shadows, firing, too, and giving orders.

First Lieutenant Osborne was with his sergeant and another lieutenant when he came upon Second Lieutenant Osborne crouched down between two rocks, his arms clasped over his bent head and his carbine dropped on the ground beside him.

There was no mistake to be made. The other lieutenant hesitated, the sergeant drew back, but Osborne went up and touched his brother with his foot.

"Lieutenant Osborne," he said to the junior, "go and report to the officer in command, Captain Clarke. I shall have preceded you and have reported you for cowardice."

He went in search of the captain and made his report, and Second Lieutenant Osborne was sent under arrest back to the dismantled horses in the rear. Then the first lieutenant threw open his blouse and covered his breast with a wide, white silk handkerchief that gleamed even in the shadow and walked out into the full moonlight.

It was a matter of only a moment before the hidden Apaches saw him with the white target on his bosom, and two of them at least took aim at the target and hit it full in the center, and First Lieutenant Osborne picked forward on the ground—Quintana Ortega in San

EXCURSION TO MILWAUKEE.

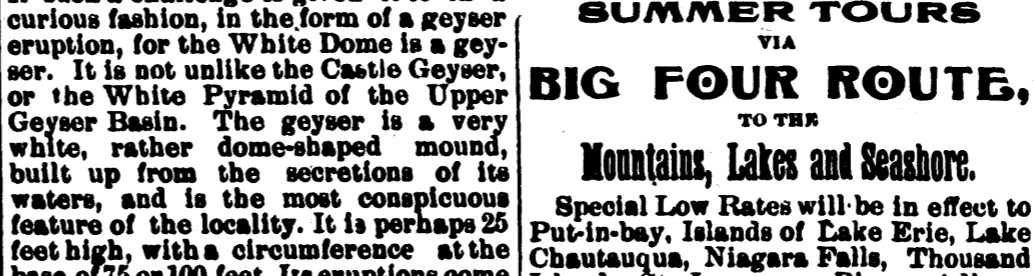

The Woodman of the World Will Give a Popular Outing. The Woodmen of the World will run an excursion on one of the Graham & Morton palace steamers to Milwaukee on Wednesday evening September 1, giving the excursionists all day Thursday in the city. Milwaukee has more attractions for excursionists than Chicago. The fare for the round trip is only $1.

White Dome Geyser Yellowstone Park. A mile and a half from the Fountain Hotel, and easily reached by bicycle, tourist wagon, or by walking, lies a hidden basin full of nature's caprices. At the entrance, as if on guard, stands the immaculate White Dome. As one approaches, he almost expects to be challenged and asked for a countersign. If such a challenge is given it is in a curious fashion, in the form of a geyser eruption, for the White Dome is a geyser, or the White Pyramid of the Upper Geyser Basin. The geyser is a very white, rather dome-shaped mound, built up from the secretions of its waters, and is the most conspicuous feature of the locality. It is perhaps 25 feet high, with a circumference at the base of 75 or 100 feet. Its eruptions come at intervals of from twenty to forty-five minutes, being somewhat irregular, and the water is thrown to a height of from ten to twenty-five feet.

SCENES AT THE REVIEWING STAND

President McKinley Shows the Liveliest Interest in the Display. How a Whole Line Shook Hands with Him—The War Secretary in the Banks—Column Requires Five Hours and Forty Minutes to Pass the Point of Review.

Buffalo, Aug. 24.—Forty-five thousand men marched through streets glorious in flags and bunting yesterday, receiving his ovations of 500,000 people. The president of the Union they fought to save, himself their comrade, was at their head. When the Grand Army procession moved at 10:30 yesterday morning the sky had not a cloud. The rain storm of the night left a clear, bracing air that was like a tonic to the marching men. The procession moved for five hours and forty-two minutes. Along the line of march 100 girls, dressed in the colors of the flag, scattered flowers in the path of the soldiers. President McKinley rode in a carriage at the head of the procession and waved his hat at the cheering crowd. At the reviewing stand he took his position with Commander-in-Chief Clarkson and Governor Black and the headquarters staff passed in review. Of all the throng viewing the procession no one person was more enthusiastic or more affected by the sight than President McKinley. With his hand on his hat, continually uncovering to the national colors or the salutes of the veterans, the president watched the array of proud veterans march by. It was certainly a column to inspire admiration. Such men as Secretary of War Alger, General Lew Wallace and General John Palmer walked side by side with the negro or the decrepit pensioner whom they had to assist.

New Style of General Hand-Shake. "Hurrah, hurrah, we'll sing the jubilee," a voice in the crowd would shout and high would rise the chorus for a few minutes, dying away as the next band in line destroyed the harmony. The president paid a pretty tribute to some colored veterans as they passed by, waving his hand to them. The Pennsylvania division was a very large one and took some time to pass. Some men from a post at Bradford, Pa., hit upon a novel method of obtaining recognition from the president. The man nearest the president was directed to get near the president and shake his hand. The others formed a chain by grasping hands. The president laughed very heartily at the scheme. It was 1 o'clock before Pennsylvania had gotten by the reviewing stand.

State of Ohio Comes Next. Ohio came next, and as her banner came in view there was a roar of applause and the president smiled his acknowledgments of the tribute. This was repeated, but with more emphasis, when the Canton, O., post came along, and the president, stepping to the front of the platform, clapped his hands vigorously, while the members of the post waved their hats and shouted. At 1:30 the president and Governor Black left the reviewing stand just as the department of Connecticut arrived at the place of review. Lunch was served at a private residence near-by. The department of Massachusetts was also disappointed at not seeing the president. The stay at lunch was brief, however, and by the time the Rhode Island delegation had come in sight the president and Governor Black were back in their places and the president was again bowing and smiling and lifting his hat to the veterans.

MICHIGAN MEN WIN APPLAUSE.

Alger Walks with His Post—Low Wallace with the Indiana.

After 2:05 the Washington division passed and was accorded a special welcome by the president, the colored veterans especially being recognized. The Michigan division earned great applause on its appearance. Detroit post especially, and the president said to Commander-in-Chief Clarkson: "That is a fine display." When Fairbank post, of Detroit, came along; Secretary of War Alger was seen upon the right flank of the first company, marching in the post uniform. When the president saw him he pointed him out and the stand occupants gave him a round of applause. With Lafayette post, of Indiana, walked General Lew Wallace, and he received a welcome. At the head of the Minnesota division a drum corps of the oldest veterans attracted the attention of the president and he gave them a special recognition.

When the Illinois division passed the veterans uncovered and waved hats and hands and the president again rising returned the salute by kissing his hand to them. The orders were very strict that in passing the reviewing stand the men should keep eyes to the front, but enthusiasm was greater than duty and nearly every post broke the rule. Not one of the interesting features of the parade escaped the president's attention, and he laughed heartily at the corn and wheat displays of the west and the complimentary references to prosperity. It was 3:10 when the New York state department, Commander Shaw and his staff, saluted the president and the New York state veterans began to file by. They comprised two divisions and formed the largest department in line. The battered flag of New York elicited great applause, and Gettysburg post, of New York city, was heartily cheered. On and on went the column, and for over an hour it was nothing but New Yorkers. General Alger joined the reviewing party while New York's delegation was passing.

It was nearly 5 o'clock when the last of New York state division, comprising a brigade of Buffalo posts, passed the stand, and after nearly six hours of constant attention the president and Governor Black were driven to their hotel amid the hurrahs of the old soldiers and the applause of the vast crowd. Throughout the entire day the great crowd was orderly and there was no interruption upon the president. The president admitted that he was tired with the day's work, but he was not at all weary. The closing scene of the reviewing was the passing of the Indiana division.

At the reviewing stand a reception by Mrs. E. C. Woodley, national president of the Army Nurses, at the Woman's Union, and numerous receptions by minor organizations. Despite the fact that President McKinley was exceedingly weary he met the local committee last night just after dinner and accompanied by Governor Black went to Music hall to meet the general public. The strain of the day, however, was too much for flesh and blood, and after he had greeted about 3,000 persons individually he was compelled to leave the hall. Fully 20,000 persons blocked the streets in the vicinity of the hall and expressed disappointment at not being permitted to shake the president's hand. Leaving Music hall the president was driven to the Buffalo club, where he received the Loyal Legion.

AMERICAN PARTY CONVENTION.

New Political Organization To Be Born at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Aug. 26.—The first national convention of the American party, a new political organization which, as the call issued from Detroit says, will be devoted to the restoration of the spirit and sentiment of the original federal constitution, met yesterday in Druid's hall with about fifty delegates present from nine states and one territory. The states represented are: New York, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Colorado, Louisiana and Indian Territory. It is stated that a number of other states have signified their willingness to co-operate in the movement. Two sessions were held and a permanent organization was effected with Ellison Stocker, of Colorado, as chairman, and J. J. Haselbach, of Detroit, as secretary. After the appointment of committees on resolutions and representation, adjournment was taken until today.

Colonel E. H. Sellers, a prominent lawyer of Detroit, who is at the head of the movement, emphatically denied the statement that this is a movement to form the American Protective Association into a political party. A lengthy address was delivered by Colonel Sellers, in which he said that the two principal parties are false to the doctrine and principles of equality and are a standing menace to popular government. He gave at length his views of needed reforms. Among other things he favored the system of initiative and referendum and equal suffrage.

NO NEED FOR A "BULL POOL."

Here Is Abundant Reason Why Our Wheat Should Boom.

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 26.—An extensive inquiry into European crop conditions conducted by the Orange Judd syndicate of agricultural papers, including the American Agriculturist, of New York; the Orange Judd Farmer, of Chicago, and the New England Homestead, of Springfield, Mass., indicates that the food crop situation abroad is very grave. Estimates of Europe's (including England) needs of wheat imports range all the way from 300,000,000 to 400,000,000 bushels. The European shortage, compared with average, is as follows: Wheat, 300,000,000 bushels; rye, 225,000,000 bushels; potatoes, 1,000,000,000. Total, 1,625,000,000 bushels.

Arrested for Wife Murder.

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 26.—Joseph Leclair has been arrested charged with the murder of his wife, whose remains were cremated last Friday night by the burning of their farm house. In a brief examination it transpired that the woman had requested neighbors that in case of her sudden death a strict investigation should be made. Leclair admitted in his testimony before the coroner's jury that they did not live happily together.

Prince Luigi Climbs the Mount.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 26.—A special to The Post-Intelligencer from Nanaimo says: Prince Luigi of Savoy and a party of Italians reached the summit of Mount St. Elias July 31 at 12 o'clock noon. The altitude indicated by the mercurial barometer is 18,100 feet. The party was fifty-one days on snow and ice without sickness or accidents.

Tomorrow 20 men will be put to work extending the lawn of the property of St. Joseph's church 16 feet. When completed the appearance of the church and rectory will be greatly beautified.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hull entertained a party of 24 cyclists last night. A spin of 10 miles was taken at 4 o'clock and returning the party was served with refreshments after which a delightful trolley ride was enjoyed.

IN THE JUSTICE COURT.

I. Witz, a Hebrew, was walking along the highway in the village of Stevensville last Saturday and picked up two apples which had fallen from a tree belonging to Charles Burandt. Mr. Burandt and his son Edward, who is a full grown man, were walking along the same highway and saw Mr. Witz pick up the fruit, whereupon they pounced upon him and while the elder Burandt held Witz the young man pounded him until his face looked as if he had been in a prize fight.

Mr. Witz appeared before Judge Cady and swore out a warrant on the charge of assault and battery and the case was called this morning. Edward Burandt pleaded guilty to the charge and paid a fine of $10 and costs amounting to $17.17.

As soon as the case was dismissed Mr. Witz at once procured the services of Charles N. Sears and started a suit for $5,000 damages for injuries received in the assault.

concerned in the game of golf, several of which have been collected in Miss Wood's recent volume of "Quotations For Occasions."

In "Much Ado About Nothing" is an unmistakable allusion to a characteristic St. Andrew's gesture in the words, "I know you by the wagging of your head," while in "Tis Andronicus" is encountered the pertinent query, "What subtle hole is this?" In "Richard III," again, one meets the line, "Put in their hands the bruising irons of wrath," and in "Henry VI" (part I) the statement "I'll call for clubs."

Faust's ruling passion was evidently golf, for on his deathbed he "babbled of green fields," and there were certainly links on Prospero's island, else why the question "Why hath the queen summoned me hither to this short grass'd green?" Some commentators prefer the reading, "To tee or not to tee, that is the question." But apart from this disputed passage in "Hamlet" there is a reference to the fault of "striking too short."

THEY HAVE THE KEY

Maccabees Enjoy Undisputed Possession of St. Joseph Today.

THOUSANDS OF THEM THERE.

Mayor Starr Welcomes Them and the Great Commander Wants St. Joe and this City United.

The Maccabees have St. Joseph today.

They possess her streets, her hotels, her park and all her public places. They throng her avenues in swarms of thousands, they invade her hotels in hordes and everywhere you turn the badge of the order stares you in the face.

It is the most significant conclave of Maccabees ever held in the county, bringing together the entire Maccabee forces of the county and the second regiment of the uniform rank, the former in the capacity of their first annual picnic and the latter for inspection by Mayor General N. C. White, of Port Huron, and Adjutant General Peter J. Abt, of Detroit.

Maccabees and their friends began pouring into the city with the arrival of the first trains and the influx continued until noon. They came from Kalamazoo, South Bend, Battle Creek, Niles, Elkhart and South Haven. The excursion over the West Michigan from the north arrived in two sections, one of 10 coaches and the other of 11, carrying the noted Celery City division, No. 15, uniform rank. A few minutes later the steamer Williams arrived with 400 passengers, including many knights, from South Haven. The regular morning trains over the Vandalia and Big Four railways were crowded and at 12 o'clock there were 3,000 visitors in St. Joseph.

The street pageant was advertised to move at 10:30 but it was 12 o'clock before the many hundreds in the parade were in line ready to obey the command of Marshal John Freund to advance. The procession formed on Broad street and was the most impressive column of people that ever threaded the streets of St. Joseph. It was fully a quarter of a mile long and was made up of the members of the various county Maccabee organizations, of bands of music and a number of the companies of the second regiment.

Headed by a platoon of police the huge column was given the order to march. Both sides of Broad street were flanked with spectators a dozen deep and the door ways and windows of the gaudily trimmed stores along the route were filled with faces. Following the police in the parade came White's military band of Kalamazoo, then the uniform rank officers, the second regiment, Watervliet tent, Stevensville tent with band; New Buffalo tent, St. Joseph Valley tent degree team, riding snow white horses; officers of St. Joseph Valley tent, next a chariot with a group of little girls bearing a banner reading, "The Coming Maccabee," then Frazell's band, and following a float with an unruly goat astride which was a happy-faced candidate giving a farce exhibition of the mysteries of initiation, then The Evening News Boys' band leading a long column of little boys who were also designated, "The Coming Maccabee."

As the procession rounded the corner, passing from Ship north on Front street thousands of people witnessed the gorgeous spectacle. After it had passed Great Commander Boynton and Mayor Starr drove up in a carriage and from a position in front of the Hotel Whitcomb watched the evolutions of the second regiment executed with perfect soldierly grace. It was expected to have a program of brief addresses this forenoon but it was nearly 1 o'clock when the procession broke up and the speaking was deferred until this afternoon.

St. Joseph Hive No 551, L. O. T. M. presented Great Commander N. S. Boynton, Great Record Keeper Emma A. Bower and Great Medical Examiner Dr. E. D. Cook, each with a basket of beautiful multi-colored flowers. The recipients kindly expressed their appreciation.

The exercises this afternoon were delayed until nearly 2:30 on account of the large crowd congregated on the Hotel Whitcomb veranda where the speakers were to stand. It was finally necessary to hire an open hack for the speakers.

Mayor John Starr made a short address of welcome in which he turned the town over to the Maccabees and spoke in regard to fraternal societies. He said that every man should be a member of some lodge. It was a duty he owed his family and in this day and age there was no excuse, as every American citizen could certainly spare the small amount necessary to pay his dues. He compared fraternal orders to the church and closed by saying that benevolent societies were a great deal nearer heaven than any church steeple. Mr. Starr then introduced Dr. Eaton, the great medical examiner. The doctor said that he was like a bill of fare for some banquet, in fact the first course—soup—for the reason that when some more eloquent orator comes he will always get in as much as a filling. He told several funny stories to prove that his assertion was correct.

Mayor Starr then introduced the father of the Maccabees, Great Commander Boynton, of Port Huron. Mr. Boynton is a tall man and reminds one of Abraham Lincoln in his personal appearance. He addressed the crowd as "Men and women, boys and girls."

"I could not hear what Mayor Starr said in his short address of welcome but, of course, it goes without saying that he praised up his city as the best in the United States, that's natural, so I need say nothing on that score. I suppose there are many here today from Benton Harbor, the town situated east. I have read for a long time about St. Joe and Benton Harbor uniting and they are no nearer uniting now than they were years ago. What's the matter? Certainly you have had a long enough courtship. Take my advice and for God's sake get married."

He then went on to give a history of the Maccabees and the benefits derived by being a member.

Following Mr. Boynton was an address by the Great Lady Medical Examiner, Mrs. Dr. Cook, and by Past Great Commander, Theodore Beaver of Niles.

The program as advertised provided for an exhibition by the U. S. life saving crew at 1:30, exhibition run by the fire department at 2:30 and a five mile bicycle race for the championship of Berrien county at 3 o'clock, but at 3:30 this afternoon these features had not been pulled off.

TO DIG FOR GOLD.

Company to Be Organized in Benton Harbor for That Purpose.

HAS A CAPITAL OF $50,000.

Plan to Furnish Money to Send Prospectors to the Gold Regions of Alaska.

John E. Barnes, John Robinson, Edgar Nichols and J. R. Eastman are organizing a stock company with a capital of $50,000 to prospect and open gold diggings in Alaska.

Their plan is to furnish money and send about twenty reliable men to the Klondike region next spring to locate claims and manage them. They desire, also, to enter into the lumber business if that industry promises good returns for an investment.

Mr. Barnes was asked by THE NEWS for information concerning their plans and was advised that the matter had not sufficiently developed to warrant giving it publicity.

$10,000 DAMAGES.

Stevensville Saloon Man is Again in Serious Trouble.

A $10,000 damage suit will be brought against Frank B. Johnson, the owner of a saloon in the village of Stevensville, by Mrs. Clara Watt, by her attorney, Charles N. Sears.

Mrs. Watt has repeatedly forbidden Johnson to sell her husband liquor and in her declaration she says he persists in selling her husband anything he asks for, thereby robbing Mr. Watt's family of the necessities of life and causing much discomfort and disgrace.

Mr. Watt draws a pension and it is alleged he no sooner draws his money than he is drunk and continues so as long as his money lasts.

Johnson seems to be having more than his share of trouble as he has been arrested several times before for violating the liquor law and has repeatedly paid heavy fines.

BRILLIANT RECEPTION.

It Was Given Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Parsal Last Night.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Parsal were given a brilliant reception at the home of Mrs. Parsal's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Jay Bernard, Broadway, last night, which was attended by fully 150 friends of the newly wedded pair.

The decorations were exquisite and refreshments of ice cream and cake were served in the dining room by petite Misses Leora Bernard and Edith Tutton while Miss Ethel Bastar served punch in the parlors.

The Mandolin club, which was hidden by banks of flowers and ferns furnished sweet music during the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Parsal will leave Sunday night for their new home in Aurora, Ill., where they will carry the best wishes of a host of friends from this city.

FIFTY-five passengers were brought down from Berrien Springs this morning on the regular passenger train over the Milwaukee, Benton Harbor & Columbus.

—E. S. Mays and wife of Kalamazoo are the guests of Capt. Ludwig and family.

Knights of the Maccabees.

It is requested that all members of Benton tent who can do so will attend the regular review tomorrow night. Business of importance is to be considered, also initiation work.

A BIT OF HISTORY.

How the Milwaukee, Benton Harbor & Columbus Came to Be Built.

IT IS AN INTERESTING STORY.

Berrien Springs Predicts the Road Will Develop the Village into a City.

In 1880 the St. Joseph Valley road was projected by parties in this place and Buchanan and a narrow gauge line was built down the river from Buchanan to this village, says the Berrien Springs Era. A survey from here to St. Joe was made and in 1881 it looked as if the road might be extended to the mouth of the river. At that time narrow gauge roads were everywhere building and it was hoped to hitch them together and create systems that would go somewhere and connect important points. The low cost of construction and the sharp curves and high grades practicable with them made people look upon them with some degree of favor as being within their reach when more pretentious roads were out of the question. Before this was found to be an erroneous view of the matter the original men in charge ran out of means and the company became moribund.

In 1882 Mr. Chase, from Joliet, Ill., a railway constructor came here and took hold of the road and hoped to enlist capital to carry it through. He did some work and improved the property between this place and Buchanan but failed to secure the necessary financial assistance and let it drop. After him came a man named Parker who did some grading between this village and Hinchman, in the north-west part of the township and never paid a cent for anything. He went with a rush until pay day and then he left for good. In the meantime Mr. T. B. Innes, of New York City, had tried to enlist capital but had not succeeded. Then Walworth D. Crane, of Baltimore, came on and had a lot of surveying done and cut quite a figure for a time but he had no means and failed to secure any and became completely stranded.

In 1889 J. J. Burns, who had experience at the west in railway building, took hold and at that time it was decided to change the northern destination of the road from St. Joseph to Benton Harbor. The grade from here to Hinchman was practically completed, except a half mile across the farm of Augustus Feather, and the gauge of the road was made standard. The light rails from Buchanan down to this village were retained as a temporary expedient and considerable work was done. It really looked as if a road would be constructed and all hands breathed easy. The local bankers had invested in it and became embarrassed and had to close their doors but they stuck to the road to pull out what they had put in. Before a fresh start could be made hard times overtook the country and again the work stood still. The plant was so decayed that it became unsafe and trains could not be run in safety and we were entirely in the dumps until last fall when the Messrs. Patterson raised the wind and began operations once more. They acquired valuable terminal property at Benton Harbor and work began in earnest. When they reached the river at the mouth of Yellow creek they put up a steel bridge which is one of the very best structures of the kind in the state. As it includes a wagon way it is a great convenience to Royalton and will prove a benefit to Benton Harbor greater than the people of that city are yet inclined to admit. Work from each end of the road was then prosecuted and last Saturday, after vexatious delays, on account of the non-arrival of material, the splice was made two miles west of town near the home of George Ewalt.

Of course much is to be done yet and, more than the short line in question, there must be extensions. The activity of Mr. Caulfield and the close relations between him and the Messrs. Patterson indicates that an extension to Nappanee, on the B. & O., a few miles west of Milford Junction, is an objective point in that direction. The company in possession of the road has acquired the South Haven & Eastern and is surveying to connect it at some convenient point with Benton Harbor and extend its line to a junction with the Grand Trunk, probably at Battle Creek. It will be seen, therefore, that this road will soon become a part of an important system, and that it will be a property we shall take pride in. Locally we shall have an outlet for our everyday business, and it brings to life the project talked of for some years, of a water power at this place which will furnish vastly more power than any other in lower Michigan. That could have but one result. It would build up here, at Berrien Springs, a town as prosperous as any in the state, for water power is so much cheaper than steam that it will invite business of desirable descriptions. We shall not have to subsidize establishments as the economy of power is an overpowering inducement. The reward is one that everybody owning property or doing business in this town will share, and the time will come when the men who have so tenaciously stuck to the old and despised St. Joe Valley railway will be thanked for the part they have taken.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

The upper peninsula societies of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will hold a big reunion and celebration at Marquette on Saturday. Many of the state officers of the organization will make addresses.

While Walter Isham, of Rives Junction, was loading his shot gun, to go hunting yesterday morning, it was accidentally discharged, the charge taking effect in his wife's ankle. It is thought amputation of the foot will be necessary.

Willis H. Kelley, of Grand Rapids, aged 40 years, was found dead in the streets yesterday. He had committed suicide by taking a dose of morphine. He was out of work and was despondent. He leaves a widow and a 3-year-old child.

Judge Russell, of Muskegon, at opening court yesterday, sentenced Ernest Meyer to two years imprisonment at hard labor at the Ionia state reformatory.

During the six months ending June 30, 1897, according to a statement issued by Railroad Commissioner Wessell yesterday, Michigan railroads earned $12,838,469, while for the same period in 1896 the earnings were $14,029,537, a decrease of $1,191,078, or 8.48 per cent. The earnings for June were $2,383,465, a decrease of $352,371 from the corresponding month in 1896. Although traffic is now increasing, it is probable that the decrease during the first half of the year will not be overcome.

While thrashing on the farm of Lewis Lefevre, four miles south of Galesburg yesterday morning, a bundle of wheat containing an explosive, presumably dynamite, was fed into the cylinder of the thrashing machine. An explosion followed which set fire to the barn, which, together with its contents, was totally destroyed. The loss is heavy. Insurance, $500. The man who was doing the feeding was blown many feet and seriously burned. It is not known how the explosive got into the wheat.

Slaughtering Prices.

We are on the warpath and must slaughter our goods if low prices will do it. Next Saturday we will sell a 20-year warranted, gold filled, ladies' or gents' Hunting case watch and a 15 jewel Elgin movement for $15.25. Don't forget it. (That day only.) 55566 Hollis & Son.

NOTHING BUT PRAISE

Hospitality of Berrien Springs Glowingly Recommended by Sunday School Excursionists.

A DELIGHTFUL DAY'S OUTING.

Plans for Their Delectation Carefully Considered by the Villagers—Picnic a Success.

The Sunday school excursionists to Berrien Spring returned last night delighted with the day's outing, delighted with the accommodation furnished by the Milwaukee, Benton Harbor & Columbus railway and with the hospitality accorded them by the citizens of the village which is the home of the court house where the county's business was transacted for many years.

When the throng of picnickers arrived at Berrien Springs there were teams, private carriages and public conveyances of all sorts waiting to receive them and transport them to the picnic grounds one-half mile away. If anyone walked it was because he had a disposition to do so. There were vehicles enough to accommodate all and they were offered so kindly and with such sincere generosity that the pilgrims, if they may be so called, were at once impressed by the puritanical dispositions of their hosts.

A band of music, a creditable organization of Berrien Springs' artists, escorted the picnickers to the grove where the dinners were to be spread. It is a beautiful retreat, covering 10 acres of gently undulating woodland, sloping easily and lazily down to the banks of the St. Joseph river at a point where the stream is gloriously rich in natural attractiveness. Here the children indulged in games, lovers sat beneath the spreading branches of the maples and the "old folks" simply rested, watching with interest the pranks of the animated youngsters.

At one o'clock snowy white cloths were spread upon the grass and the contents of baskets were invitingly arrayed upon them. Around the viaducts in neighboring groups assembled the picnickers and a happy festival followed. After dinner George F. Sonner, the committee on amusements, got a group of frolicsome boys to do some springing, offering a Waterbury watch as a prize. Fred Northup was the winner but before he dared claim the prize he was required to enter in a foot race with Myrtle Walker, a fleet-footed little miss who had bested a number of competitors in a girls' race. Myrtle was given a start of 20 feet, and she reached the tape dangerously close to her sturdier competitor.

The villagers most prompt in providing for the enjoyment of the visitors may be mentioned Henry Kephart. He is a particular friend of George F. Sonner, and as Mr. Sonner had been diligent in consummating the arrangements for the picnic and was studious in his efforts to have it pass off happily, Mr. Kephart felt disposed to assist him as much as possible.

The 10-mile ride over the newly completed Milwaukee, Benton Harbor & Columbus railway was an experience greatly appreciated. The road is very properly the "scenic" route of Michigan. The first seven miles of the road bed is comparatively smooth, while beyond that distance there are a few disagreeable elevations. The landscape at the bridge where the road crosses the river, is rapturous and interested many eyes yesterday.

The remaining distance to Berrien Springs the road passes among orchards of ripe fruit and over elevations which command magnificent views of the surrounding fruit farms.

ABOUT THE COUNTY.

Eau Claire.

EAU CLAIRE, Aug. 26.—James Perrine Hamilton, the blind lecturer and scholar gave his interesting lecture, "What a blind man saw in Europe," in the M. E. church last evening. The lecture was given in the interest of the young people's society of the U. B. and M. E. churches, and all who heard it were greatly interested.

An opportunity will soon be given to the voters of this village, to decide whether the town shall be bonded to secure a public hall or not. The question is being discussed and no doubt will be settled properly by the votes of the citizens.

The building is to be completed in 40 days and will be a great improvement over the buildings recently burned.

NILES Mirror: Norman Jarvis, of Dowagiac, called at the Mirror office on Saturday. In 1838 he commenced boating on the St. Joseph river, working for Britain & Sullivan, a firm at St. Joseph, Joseph Brewet, captain. There are but few of the old river sailors left. Mr. Jarvis left the river 54 years ago and purchased a farm of 270 acres, two miles southeast of Dowagiac on McKinney's prairie, where he has resided ever since. He is 76 years old, has a wife and family, consisting of three sons and seven daughters, all married but one, her husband being killed in Niles the night before election in 1892.

The Clear & Safe Fruit Transportation

It was a long time that he sat
in the dark, I know not where,
For so swiftly it flew, the light
Could not follow it in its flight.
I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where,
For who has sight so keen and strong
That it can follow the flight of song?
Long, long afterward in an oak
I found the arrow still unbroken,
And the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.
—Henry W. Longfellow.

A BROTHER'S KEEPER

When a man who is yet young arrives at the conclusion that life holds nothing more for him and that he can only devote himself to the good of others, there is plenty of keen wretchedness in store for him. If he gets up after a bad blow and is actively miserable and somewhat hateful and resentful, he can yet be happy. But self-immolation is not natural, and anything unnatural brings its own punishment. Another person and other people cannot be the center of the universe for very long. There may come a jar that will put you out of plumb for a bit, but you swing back to your normal position.

The jar that came to Osborne was a hard one. The girl to whom he was engaged told him that her parents were forcing her to marry a certain rich man. Now parents in these days do not force one to marry anybody, but Osborne would have believed whatever the girl had chosen to tell him. He believed this and thought she was a beautiful, suffering martyr, and there was a tragic scene, which she did cleverly, and a parting. After that Osborne lost even ambition, which had been a ruling passion almost above his love. The girl was mean enough, too, to keep his misery alive by writing to him now and then bawling her gilded captivity.

Life, he told himself, was henceforth a vain thing, only fit to be used in the service of others. It is not easy to serve others picturesquely in the army. There are no needy and no fallen ones, because when they fall they cease to be in the army. So Osborne betthought him of his brother Alexander.

Alexander lived on a ranch, as Osborne had done. He was 17 years old. At 16 Osborne had been the support of a widowed mother and two children. He had had no boyhood in particular. It had all been work making the ranch pay. Only those who have tried it know what that means. Alexander was not afflicted after this fashion. He lived on his new stepfather and was envious of his brother.

Now, when Osborne brought Alexander on to San Antonio the first evening of his arrival he spoke to him thus: "There's a first class school right in the town, Alex." [Silence.] "I want you to study hard, youngster, to make up for the time you've lost up there in the wilderness."

Alex traced his feet against the porch railing and tipped back his chair. "It strikes me I've lost more fun than about anything else. It ain't fair, Herbert. You've been having a picnic for the last eight years, while I've been slaving in the fields, and I don't see it in the light of settling down right away to digging at books. I want a swing."

If a nature is ambitious, it cannot be altered. The ambition may transfer its object from self to some one else, but it will not die. Osborne's had transferred itself to his brother. So his heart sank. But he had learned toleration. "Well, I'll give you three months, but you must study to make up for it."

"Three months nothing! What's the matter with six?"

"A good deal is the matter. You'll be nearly 18 in six months, and you don't know as much as the average boy of 14. Of course I'm not blaming you for that. You haven't had a fair chance." Osborne forgot that at 16 he himself had passed the competitive examination.

"I guess I haven't—at that or anything else."

Young Osborne had gone barefoot all his life and had never had a whole new suit of clothes to his back or a dime to call his own. Osborne gave him dancing pumps and various seemingly suits and a reasonable allowance.

But he thought the allowance small. "Say, Herbert, I can't make out with that measly ten. Make it 15, will you?" he complained.

"No," said Osborne.

Osborne's "noes" were always definite, but Alexander persisted. "Why not? You've a lot more than you need."

"I know best about that. Ten dollars is enough, and it's all I can give you. I've your education to pay for, recollect. You've no expenses outside of an occasional theater ticket and tennis ball—or you shouldn't have."

"You always did catch all the plums," said Alexander.

Then the mail orderly gave Osborne a letter from the girl. Osborne looked himself in his workroom and read it and believed every word of it. And living—even for others—seemed a hard thing for the next few days.

Alexander felt his oats promptly. He excelled at baseball, he learned tennis and dancing by magic and he rode well. Osborne had never been so popular. He had served the Mammoth of ambition exclusively until he had transferred his allegiance to the god of love. Since then he had been a martyr—and martyrs are more pleasing in stained glass than in life. And now he returned to the first cult, and ambition killed him. He rejoiced in his brother's success, which was of the Bertie Cecil type, in his magnificent stature, in his skill and his athletics. He mounted him on the finest horse he had in the part of the country—and from a certain point all eyes were turned to him. He was the only one who could follow the flight of song.

"Alex, the account of you is very bad. You've barely scratched through on two things, and you've failed on mathematics altogether. I've told you that mathematics is the test at the Point," Osborne admonished.
"Oh, come, I say, let up, Herbert. I'm trying to learn this piece." He picked up with beautiful absorption at the guitar the lieutenant had given him.
"Put up that thing and listen to me."
Alexander obeyed, as all men did when Osborne would.

"I am going to get you into West Point at 30. When I say I am going to do it, you know it is going to be done. Don't you? None of it depends on you except the study. I can't make you drink, but I'll take you to water and keep you there until you find it will be easier to drink. You can go back to the ranch if you like, but I'm not afraid you'll like it. I don't want to treat you as a small boy unless you act the part of one. You can learn and you must learn or the theaters will stop, and the hops will stop, and the guitar will stop—also the tennis. You have been cutting time, but henceforth you will study four hours a day and I will sit with you to help you and see that it is done."

So four hours out of every 24 Osborne put to the use of teaching one who did not wish to learn. Density can be bored through with patience. It is the india rubber of indifferent cleverness that resists. After some of the struggles Osborne would lie awake for the rest of the night from sheer nervousness. The boy slept with untroubled brain. The lieutenant almost came to forget the girl, but never quite. A letter would come when Alexander was most inert, and Osborne would stare straight in front of him and grit his teeth and wonder that a man could live with both sides of his nature thwarted and put back. But he had his reward. Alexander went into the academy at 30. He was the handsomest and most popular cadet in his class—and he failed in the first year.

Just how such things are done no one is ever quite sure, but in Osborne's case it must have been sheer force of determination. Alexander was reappointed, and he himself was made instructor at the Point.

He stood over the cadet with the stinging lash of his ambition, and Alexander was graduated. Osborne unwisely took some credit to himself.

"Nonsense!" said Alexander. "I'd have done it alone. The first miss was only bad luck. Don't think it's your circus."

"It doesn't make any great difference to me whose circus it is so that you come out all right. I'm only glad you're getting some ambition."

"Ambition be hanged! It's the one word in your lexicon. I'm sick of the sound of it. It is the sin by which the angels fell. Look out you don't fall, angel brother."

"I'm not likely to fall, but I should not mind it if it put you on a mountain height."

"No heights for me. I can't breathe rare air," answered the younger.

Now in the course of army events it came to pass that a straggle fate made Alexander Osborne second lieutenant in the troop of which his brother was first lieutenant, and the first lieutenant continued his ambitious goading. Alexander was independent at present and resisted to some purpose. He would not spend his nights in study and his days in wire pulling. The war department did not reward that sort of thing, he said. It was action it approved. Wait until his time for action came. Then he would satisfy his brother.

And the time for action did come, but the action was disappointing. They marched 200 miles and then marched back again. Alexander complained loudly that he had had no occasion to display his prowess in battle.

He should have been quite safe in this, for that evening they would be once more in Grant. But the Indian host is not to be reckoned with. At sunset, within ten miles of the post, the Apaches caught the battalion in a ravine and kept it there until well into the night.

The moon came up and showed to the bucks hiding behind the cedars and scrub oaks on the rise the soldiers penned in the gully below them. It was merely for the latter a question of holding out and having a few men killed. The danger was not great unless the Apaches should be re-enforced or the couriers should not reach the fort. So the men took shelter behind bushes and rocks and fired at the flashes of light in the darkness above them. The officers walked about in the deep shadows, firing, too, and giving orders.

First Lieutenant Osborne was with his sergeant and another lieutenant when he came upon Second Lieutenant Osborne crouched down between two rocks, his arms clasped over his bent head and his carbine dropped on the ground beside him.

There was no mistake to be made. The other lieutenant hesitated, the sergeant drew back, but Osborne went up and touched his brother with his foot.

"Lieutenant Osborne," he said to the junior, "go and report to the officer in command, Captain Clarke. I shall have preceded you and have reported you for cowardice."

He went in search of the captain and made his report, and Second Lieutenant Osborne was sent under arrest back to the dismounted horses in the rear. Then the first lieutenant threw open his blouse and covered his breast with a wide, white silk handkerchief that gleamed even in the shadow and walked out into the full moonlight.

It was a matter of only a moment before the hidden Apaches saw him with the white target on his breast, and fired at him.

White Dome Geyser Yellowstone Park.

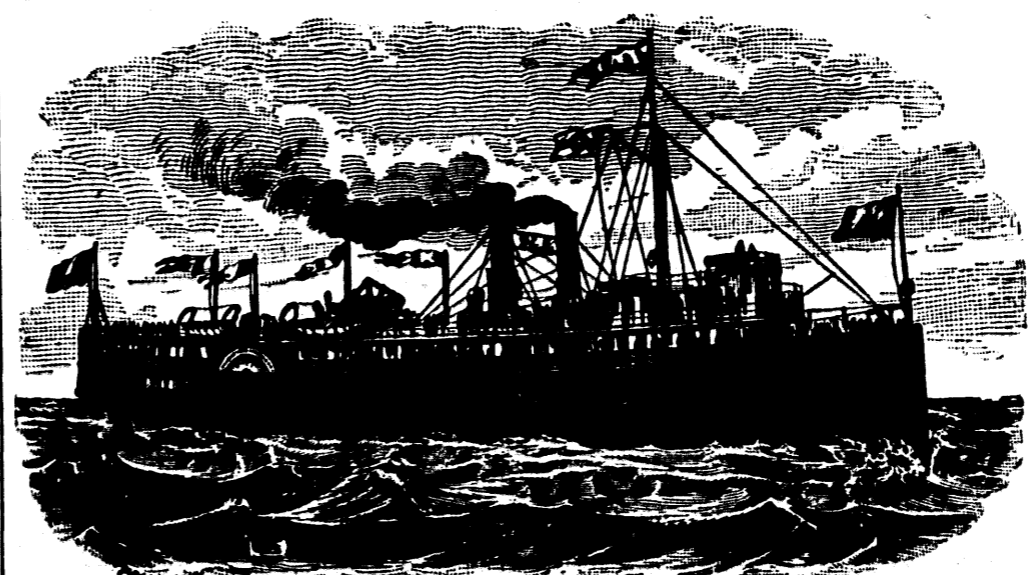

"A mile and a half from the Fountain Hotel, and easily reached by bicycle, tourist wagon, or by walking, lies a hidden basin full of nature's caprices. At the entrance, as if on guard, stands the immaculate White Dome. As one approaches, he almost expects to be challenged and asked for a countersign. If such a challenge is given it is in a curious fashion, in the form of a geyser eruption, for the White Dome is a geyser. It is not unlike the Castle Geyser, or the White Pyramid of the Upper Geyser Basin. The geyser is a very white, rather dome-shaped mound, built up from the secretions of its waters, and is the most conspicuous feature of the locality. It is perhaps 25 feet high, with a circumference at the base of 75 or 100 feet. Its eruptions come at intervals of from twenty to forty-five minutes, being somewhat irregular, and the water is thrown to a height of from ten to twenty-five feet."

Forty-Five Thousand of the Boys

at Buffalo.

SCENES AT THE REVIEWING STAND

President McKinley Shows the Liveliest
Interest in the Display—How a Whole
Line Shook Hands with Him—The War
Secretary in the Rank—Columbia Requires
Five Hours and Forty Minutes to Pass
the Point of Review.

Buffalo, Aug. 26.—Forty-five thousand
men marched through streets glorious in
flags and bunting yesterday, receiving
the ovations of 500,000 people. The president of the Union they fought to save,
himself their comrade, was at their head.
When the Grand Army procession moved
at 10:30 yesterday morning the sky had
not a cloud. The rain storm of the night
left a clear, bracing air that was like a
tonic to the marching men. The procession
moved for five hours and forty-two minutes. Along the line of march 100 girls,
dressed in the colors of the flag, scat-
tered flowers in the path of the soldiers.
President McKinley rode in a carriage
at the head of the procession and waved
his hat at the cheering crowd. At the
reviewing stand he took his position
with Commander-in-Chief Clarkson and Governor Black and the headquarters
staff passed in review. Of all the throng
viewing the procession no one person
was more enthusiastic or more affected
by the sight than President McKinley.
With his hand on his hat, continually
uncovering to the national colors or the
salutes of the veterans, the president
watched the array of proud veterans
march by. It was certainly a column
to inspire admiration. Such men as Secretary of War Alger, General Lew Wallace and General John Palmer walked
side by side with the negro or the de-
crepit pensioner whom they had to assist.

New Style of General Hand-Shake.

"Hurrah, hurrah, we'll sing the jubilee,"
a voice in the crowd would shout
and high would rise the chorus for a few minutes, dying away as the next
band in line destroyed the harmony. The
president paid a pretty tribute to some
colored veterans as they passed by waving his hand to them. The Pennsylvania division was a very large one and took some time to pass. Some men from a post at Bradford, Pa., hit upon a novel
method of obtaining recognition from
the president. The man nearest the president was directed to get near the president and shake his hand. The others
formed a chain by grasping hands. The
president laughed very heartily at the
scheme. It was 1 o'clock before Pennsylvania had gotten by the reviewing
stand.

State of Ohio Comes Next.

Ohio came next, and as her banner
came in view there was a roar of ap-
plause and the president smiled his ac-
knowledgments of the tribute. This was
repeated, but with more emphasis, when
the Canton, O., post came along, and the
president, stepping to the front of the
platform, clapped his hands vigorously,
while the members of the post waved
their hats and shouted. At 1:30 the president and Governor Black left the
reviewing stand just as the department
of Connecticut arrived at the place of
review. Lunch was served at a private residence near-by. The department of Massachusetts was also disappointed at
not seeing the president. The stay at
lunch was brief, however, and by the
time the Rhode Island delegation had
come in sight the president and Govern-
or Black were back in their places and
the president was again bowing and
smiling and lifting his hat to the veterans.

MICHIGAN MEN WIN APPLAUSE.

Alger Walks with His Post—Low Wallace
with the Indianians.

After 2:05 the Washington division
passed and was accorded a special wel-
come by the president, the colored veterans especially being recognized. The Michigan division earned great applause
on its appearance. Detroit post especially, and the president said to Commander-in-Chief Clarkson: "That is a
fine display." When Fairbank post, of
Detroit, came along, Secretary of War
Alger was seen upon the right flank of
the first company, marching in the post
uniform. When the president saw him
he pointed him out and the stand oc-
cupants gave him a round of applause.
With Lafayette post, of Indiana, walked
General Low Wallace, and he received
a welcome. At the head of the Minnesota division a drum corps of the
oldest veterans attracted the attention
of the president and he gave them a
special recognition.

When the Illinois division passed the
veterans uncovered and waved hats and
hands and the president again rising re-
turned the salute by kissing his hand to
them. The orders were very strict that
in passing the reviewing stand the men
should keep eyes to the front, but enthusiasm was greater than duty and
nearly every post broke the rule.

Not one of the interesting features of
the parade escaped the president's attention, and he laughed heartily at the
corn and wheat displays of the west and
the complimentary references to prosperity. It was 3:10 when the New York
state department, Commander Shaw
and his staff, saluted the president and
the New York state veterans began to file
by. They comprised two divisions and
formed the largest department in line.
The battered flag of New York elicited
great applause, and Gettysburg post,
of New York city, was heartily cheered.
On and on went the column, and for
over an hour it was nothing but New Yorkers. General Alger joined the re-
viewing party while New York's delegation was passing.

It was nearly 5 o'clock when the last
of New York state division, comprising
a brigade of Buffalo posts, passed the
stand, and after nearly six hours of constant attention the president and Governor Black were driven to their hotel
amid the hurrahs of the old soldiers
and the applause of the vast crowd.
Throughout the entire day the great
crowd was orderly and there was no interruption upon the president. The president admitted that he was tired with
the day's work but stated:

At the President's home, a reception by Mrs. F. C. McKinley, national president of the Army Nurses, at the Woman's Union, and numerous receptions by minor organizations.
Despite the fact that President Mc-Kinley was exceedingly weary he met
the local committee last night just after dinner and accompanied by Governor Black went to Music hall to meet the general public. The strain of today, however, was too much for flesh and blood, and after he had greeted about 3,000 persons individually he was compelled to leave the hall. Fully 20,000 persons blocked the streets in the vicinity
of the hall and expressed disappointment
at not being permitted to shake the president's hand. Leaving Music hall the president was driven to the Buffalo club,
where he received the Loyal Legion.

AMERICAN PARTY CONVENTION.

New Political Organization To Be Born at
St. Louis.

St. Louis, Aug. 26.—The first national convention of the American party, a
new political organization which, as the
call issued from Detroit says, will be
devoted to the restoration of the spirit and
sentiment of the original federal con-
stitution, met yesterday in Druid's hall
with about fifty delegates present from
nine states and one territory. The states
represented are: New York, Ohio, Mich-
igan, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas,
Colorado, Louisiana and Indian Territory. It is stated that a number of other states have signified their willingness to co-operate in the movement. Two sessions were held and a permanent organization was effected with Ellison Stocker,
of Colorado, as chairman, and J. J. Has-
selbach, of Detroit, as secretary. After
the appointment of committees on resolutions and representation, adjournment
was taken until today.

Colonel E. H. Sellers, a prominent
lawyer of Detroit, who is at the head
of the movement, emphatically denied the
statement that this is a movement to form
the American Protective Association in-
to a political party. A lengthy address
was delivered by Colonel Sellers, in
parties are false to the doctrine and
principles of equality and are a standing
menace to popular government. He gave
at length his views of needed reforms.
Among other things he favored the system of initiative and referendum and
equal suffrage.

NO NEED FOR A "BULL POOL."

Here Is Abundant Reason Why Our Wheat
Should Boom.

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 26.—An extensive inquiry into European crop conditions conducted by the Orange Judd
syndicate of agricultural papers, includ-
ing the American Agriculturist, of
New York; the Orange Judd Farmer, of
Chicago; and the New England Home-
stead, of Springfield, Mass., indicates
that the food crop situation abroad is
very grave. Estimates of Europe's (including England) needs of wheat imports range all the way from 300,000,000
to 400,000,000 bushels. The European shortage, compared with average, is as follows: Wheat, 300,000,000 bushels; rye, 235,000,000 bushels; potatoes, 1,000,000-
000. Total, 1,625,000,000 bushels.

Arrested for Wife Murder.

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 26.—Joseph Le-
clair has been arrested charged
with the murder of his wife,
whose remains were cremated last Fri-
day night by the burning of their farm
house. In a brief examination it trans-
pired that the woman had requested
neighbors that in case of her sudden
death a strict investigation should be
made. Leclair admitted in his testimony before the coroner's jury that
they did not live happily together.

FOR ADULTERY.

Amos Day and Miss Belle Peters Are Arrested.

Officer McDonald, of Sawyer, arrived at the county jail this morning with Amos Day who will remain in prison until Tuesday, August 31, when he and Miss Belle Peters will have a hearing before Justice Sawyer of Hinckman on the charge of adultery lodged against them by Day's wife. Both live in Stevensville.

It was the intention of the justice to have Miss Peters locked in jail until the time for her hearing but she is ill at the home of her parents and cannot be removed.

INDIAN CHILDREN.

Brace Knapp Will Send Them to the Haskell Institute.

Brace Knapp has received a letter from Superintendent J. A. Sweet, of the Haskell Institute at Lawrence, Kas., advising him that school opens September 1 and that all whom he intends to send must be there before that date.

Mr. Knapp is situated so he can furnish transportation to all children of Indian descent who desire to attend the school. The expenses of the children at the school is borne by the institution so that it costs the parents nothing.

All parents who have children whom they desire shall attend the institute are urged to advise him at once that he can arrange for their transportation. Paul Knapp and Miss Myrtle Dixon of this city will attend the institute here.

Tomorrow 29 men will be put to work extending the lawn of the property of St. Joseph's church 16 feet. When completed the appearance of the church and rectory will be greatly beautified.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hull entertained a party of 24 cyclists last night. A spin of 10 miles was taken at 4 o'clock and returning the party was served with refreshments after which a delightful trolley ride was enjoyed.

IN THE JUSTICE COURT.

I. Witz, a Hebrew, was walking along the highway in the village of Stevensville last Saturday and picked up two apples which had fallen from a tree belonging to Charles Burandt. Mr. Burandt and his son Edward, who is a full grown man, were walking along the same highway and saw Mr. Witz pick up the fruit, whereupon they pounced upon him and while the elder Burandt held Witz the young man pounded him until his face looked as if he had been in a prize fight.

Mr. Witz appeared before Judge Cady and swore out a warrant on the charge of assault and battery and the case was called this morning. Edward Burandt pleaded guilty to the charge and paid a fine of $10 and costs amounting to $17.17.

As soon as the case was dismissed Mr. Witz at once procured the services of Charles N. Sears and started a suit for $5,000 damages for injuries received in the assault.

AMONG THE CRIMINALS.

reference to the game of golf, several of which have been collected in Miss Wood's recent volume of "Quotations For Occasions."

In "Much Ado About Nothing" is an unmistakable allusion to a characteristic St. Andrew's gesture in the words, "I know you by the wagging of your head," while in "Titus Andronicus" is encountered the pertinent query, "What subtle hole is this?" In "Richard III," again, one meets the line, "Put in their hands the bruising irons of wrath," and in "Henry VI" (part I) the statement "I'll call for clubs."

Salstaff's ruling passion was evidently golf, for on his deathbed he "babbled of green fields," and there were certainly links on Prospero's island, else why the question "Why hath the queen summoned me hither to this short grass'd green?" Some commentators prefer the reading, "To tee or not to tee, that is the question." But apart from this disputed passage in "Hamlet" there is a reference to the fault of "striking too short."
